GREEKS SEIZE OF TEPERELI AREA

Fascist Attempts To Take Over Offensive Are Turned To Rout

Mountain Positions Of "Great Importance" Captured By Greeks—Gains Also Made North Of Kleura

ATHENS, Feb. 1.—(AP)—The entire Tepelena area was reported under Greek control today, with the actual occupation of the town only a question of mopping up isolated detachments.

The high command said the Greeks had captured Italian mountain positions "of great importance," and Greek dispatches declared recent Fascist efforts to seize the offensive in Albania must be regarded as failures.

The Greeks were also reported to have made important gains both north of Kleura and in the coastal sector where counterattacks were crushed with heavy losses to the Italians. The fighting in the central sector yesterday was described as one of the major battles since the outbreak of the conflict three months ago.

The Royal Air Force commander declared an "important military camp and buildings" south of the front line, leaving only the road to Valona open to the Italians, and to the retreating, in the direction of that port.

The Greeks now dominate Tepelena from three sides, dispatches from the front said, leaving only the road to Valona open to the Italians, and to the retreating, in the direction of that port.

The mountain range near Tepelena, occupied by the Greeks, was described as one of the best fortified positions in Albania—the Italians having added to defenses built earlier during the reign of King Zog when the Italian troops were machine-gunned as they emerged from tunnels, the communiqué said.

The smallest denomination certificate has a face value of $5 and is bought with $4, with the same maturity period.

Theme of the campaign is expressed in the words of His Majesty the King.

GREATEST AIR RAIDS OF ALL TIME COMING

Reliable British Sources Predict Heavy Fights Before Spring

By EDWIN STOUT

LONDON, Feb. 1.—(AP)—The weather has dampened the duelling of Britain and Germany's air forces, leaving the field of battle to cross-channel gun, but reliable sources predicted today a springtime will bring a greater fury and ferocity than the world has ever seen.

By mid-afternoon the only reports of actual warfare were of a renewal of bombardment of the Dover area by German long-range guns on the French coast. Intermittent shells rang through the channel fog for three hours, but casualties were reported.

DWARF OTHER COMBAT
Bombing on an unprecedented scale, as envisaged by British sources, might cause hundreds of thousands of casualties in Britain, Germany and Italy when the spring unleashes the rival air forces.

The forecast clashes of air forces would dwarf the fiercest combats over England in late August and September when in one day the Germans lost 100 planes and saw 500 British planes shot down.

"The present, full day is due to weather," one source said. "As the weather improves, the scale of attacks will increase in proportion to the weather."

REASONS FOR FORECAST
Aside from consideration of the weather, the following reasons were listed for the prediction of terrific air warfare:

"Germany must bring Britain to her knees in 1941 if she is going to win. An air attack on a big scale must pave the way for an invasion attempt if it is to have any chance of succeeding."

"Britain, a country with a powerful air force, will be forced to use it to the limit to prevent Germany from using its air force as fast as planes are produced."

Informed quarters said there is little doubt Hitler is making forces for a vast, formidably equipped assault far heavier than anything already have killed or injured nearly 60,000 persons in Britain and Germany, and that properly done, Britain is well prepared for the worst.

Air Vice-Marshals
Breadner, Sedman
Return To Canada

AN EAST COAST CANADIAN PORT, Feb. 1.—(CP)—Air vice-marshals S. B. Breadner and E. W. Sedman of the Royal Canadian Air Force returned to Canada today after a month in Britain, where they had been on duty.

Traveling with the air officials were many men in uniform, including men of the Royal Navy, Canadian army and Canadian air force, and a number of civilians and officials on leave from the British government.

Premier Urges War Savings
For Great Battle To Come

OTAWA, Feb. 1.—(CP)—A forecast that "within a few weeks we are certain to witness war as the world has never known it before."

The warning was contained in a statement made by a government spokesman today throughout the Dominion, for subscriptions to war savings certificates.

Planes Make Long Flight For Attack On Libyan Capital

Three Italian Ships In Harbor Are Hit As R.A.F. Drops Tons Of Explosives During Heavy Bombardment

By PHILLIPS TAYLOR

CAIRO, Feb. 1.—(AP)—The Royal Air Force today carried British air force against Italy in Africa to western Libya where Tripoli was reported heavily bombed.

R.A.F. planes reported that last night they poured several tons of bombs on Tripoli, hitting both a Roman town and one 4,000-ton ships in the harbor.

The docks area were heavily hit, the R.A.F. reported.

It was the first heavy attack on Tripoli in recent days although the R.A.F. previously had bombed that Italian port.

At the same time the R.A.F. again attacked Benghazi, about midway between Berka and Benghazi, the sole remaining Italian base in Libya.

Hundreds of incendiaries and high explosive bombs were dropped on Benghazi.

The attack on Tripoli involved a long distance flight for the R.A.F. planes, a 500-mile round trip from the most advanced British base in Libya and 700 miles from Cairo, where the British have set up and air base.

The minimum required flight of the British bombers was 1,000 miles.

It was presumed that the R.A.F. attack was designed to smash Italian preparations for resistance in western Libya and possibly to have been directed against arrival of reinforcements and supplies.

Thus far the R.A.F. has shown no indication whether they intend to carry their drive beyond Benghazi, several hundred miles of desolate uninhabited desert beyond Benghazi from Tripoli.

The R.A.F. attack may have been against arrival of German air reinforcements in Libya. The British have made it known that they expect major German air force to arrive in Libya.

Fighting between retreating Italian forces and the British army of the Nile west of captured Benghazi, was reported in a British communiqué.

Headquarters said also that Italian pressure on Italian troops in the African desert was being intensified.

Contact with the enemy west of Derna is being maintained, the communiqué said.

KNOX WORRIED OVER SPEED OF AID TO BRITAIN

Not Certain Help Can Be Given In Time To Save British Is Evidence

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1.—(AP)—Gen. Frank Knox, secretary of the United States navy, testified today he is "tremendously worried" over whether the United States could furnish sufficient aid in time to save Great Britain.

Supporting the administration's aid-to-Britain legislation before the Senate Foreign Relations committee, Knox was asked by Senator Gerald Nye (Rep., North Dakota) whether the measure was designed to "underwrite a British victory."

"Frankly, I don't know," the witness responded. "I tremendously worry."

While Col. Knox testified, a crowd of several hundred soldiers, sailors and airmen gathered outside. Police kept most of them outside but permitted several to enter the building to talk to Sen. Nye.

CANADA-WIDE WAR SAVINGS DRIVE OPENS

Effort Will Be Made To Obtain Two Million Pledges

OTTAWA, Feb. 1.—(CP)—A dominion-wide drive to obtain pledges from 2,000,000 Canadians to make regular purchases of war savings certificates was launched today and continue throughout February.

The campaign will be carried out by 20,000 workers, directed by provincial, county and district committees. Each potential investor will be pledged to make monthly purchases of as much as $10 an effort for the duration of the war.

A limit of $500 face value is placed on the amount one individual may invest in war savings certificates in the calendar year.

This amount can be bought for $45 and the full face value becomes payable to the investor 15 years after date of purchase. Thus pledges can be made for a sum of $40 a month throughout the year.

The smallest denomination certificate has a face value of $5 and is bought with $4, with the same maturity period.

Theme of the campaign is expressed in the words of His Majesty the King.

Today's War Moves

By J. W. T. MASON

British Empire War Effort
Marshall Pétain and Hitler are now fighting the second battle of France, with the French position stronger at present than during last spring's blitzkrieg.

The fact that France still is able to hold off Hitler's diplomatic offensive shows how conditions have changed to Germany's disadvantage since the French capitulation seven months ago.

The great British effort between Vichy and Berlin is Germany's inability to overcome
Britain's power at sea and Italy's desperate situation in the face of the British navy in the Atlantic.

Hitler is trying to force France to come to the rescue of the Axis, which Marshal Pétain refuses.

Germany wants control of the French fleet and wishes to send Nazi troops to French North Africa.
The French warships were to take their hands they could be used with the Italian fleet and thereby change the naval situation in the Mediterranean.

SEIL POWERFUL
The French navy still is powerful, especially in cruiser, destroyer and submarine. If it were not for German orders, Great Britain would have to keep it in the Mediterranean to keep control of the sea.

To do that British warships in the Atlantic would have to be destroyed.
That would mean a decline in the British navy.

It was also protected by a series of trenches and barbed wire of twisted wire.

MEETS WORMS FATE

The most recent Italian counter-attack, in the coastal sector apparently between Chima and Velina, "met a fate worse than any" of the others in the series, a Greek military spokesman declared.

"These Fascist troops were pursued by us, and we succeeded in capturing a mountain 1300 metres 14000 feet high, beyond the post from which the Italians launched this counter-attack," he said.

Two other heights also were taken, the spokesman said, and 200 prisoners, including seven officers, were captured.

Greek troops were reported last night to be advancing rapidly in the region north of captured Kilaia to the central front.

At one point on the front, the high command said, an Italian tank attack "was shattered at the start," while at another place troops operating in mountainous terrain captured high equipped "remains positions" of great importance and secured "about 150 prisoners."

Justy, King George VI. This time we are all in the front line.

Canadians will be asked to authorize employers to make regular payroll deductions for certificates to make plain "house" pledges to the committee to buy regularly.

It is understood also that the present drive has been launched in war savings certificates since they were first of all issued to school children who were to bring the annual investment to $100.000.

MEETS WORMS FATE

Canadians must give the armed forces and the British people not only the money but the spirit behind them when they are fighting, we heard today and reminded to supporters.

"We H. Somerville and de Gars, Beaulieu, joint national chairman of the war savings committee said.

"It is hoped that the front window of every home in the country will display a card indicating that the household is pledged to regular war saving."

Their statement said will reflect the will to "win" it all by doing nothing in return for the freedom, the safety and the comfort enjoyed by us today.

PROVIDE WEAPONS

Besides the important obligation of furnishing the means to arm and equip our soldiers, our sailors and our air force, there is the privilege of assisting now and at once the people of Great Britain in their heroic resistance.

"We urge our armed forces and the British people the weapons which it is right to buy."

"We have heard Canada, by the grace of God, are free from the burden of debt, and the United Kingdom are called upon to ensure that the people of Great Britain are not at all short of money for their war effort."

Statement Of Pattullo On Rowell-Sirois Report

VANCOUVER, Feb. 1.—(CP)—The following is the text of the statement on the Rowell-Sirois report issued Friday by Premier Pattullo of British Columbia.

During the time that I was away I was able, thanks to rapid transportation, to be kept advised of much that was said about my activities at the recent Dominion-Provincial Conference at Ottawa.

I am not at all alarmed that the unreasoning and intemperate attacks, which have been made upon me, will destroy the confidence which the people of British Columbia have shown in me for the past quarter of a century.

OPPOSES CENTRALIZATION

The reason that I oppose the carrying out of Plan I of the Sirois commission's report is that I am opposed to the kind of centralization which it would impose and its deterrent effects upon the progress of our province.

The carrying out of Plan I of the Sirois report is not necessary for the prosecution of the war, and the plan was prepared as a peacetime measure. The Dominion government has ample power under the War Measures Act to take all necessary steps to winning of the war, without changing the constitution in manner which will have vital effect upon the autonomy of the provinces in perpetuity.

Neither in Ontario nor in Quebec has there been exhibited such animosity and bitterness as has been shown by proponents of the commission's scheme in British Columbia, notwithstanding that of all the provinces of Canada, British Columbia more than any other province should be opposed to the measure, as it would suffer most under it.

If anyone will examine the statement which I submitted to the conference and interpret the words of it in their usual meaning, he will understand why we took the position which we did take.

REFUTES CLAIM

Fault has been found that I had prepared the statement before I left Victoria and consequently, that I had started out to "scuttle" the conference.

I prepared the statement in Victoria because nothing that the Prime Minister of Canada or anyone else could say, could change the report of the commission. The course which I pursued at the conference was followed after consultation with and concurrence of my colleagues at the conference.

I had no intention of scuttling the conference and was anxious indeed for it to proceed, but not upon the basis of the agenda submitted by the Dominion government, which was based on Plan I of the commission's report.

The statement which I prepared and had printed in Victoria would have been presented to the conference regardless of the attitude of any other province.

I made clear the position of British Columbia in open conference at Ottawa on January 14 and 15. I tried statement with the conference the first day, which clearly showed why British Columbia opposed implementation of Plan I of the Sirois report, and I also advised the conference that I could not concur in the proposal to go into committee on the agenda submitted, as I was opposed to the principle of the recommendations under the plan.

TERMS OF AGENDA

In the agenda proposed by the Dominion government, which did not reach me in Victoria until January 2, 1941, long after the provincial legislature had prorogued, the Prime Minister advised me that following statement by himself, the provincial premiers would be asked to express the views of the provincial governments on the general principles embodied in the commission's recommendations.

The following are the terms of the agenda in respect of the appointment of a finance committee:

"To review the commission's Plan I in detail discussing the proposed transfers of revenues and expenditures, the national adjustment grant mechanism, and the finance commission functions in successive stages. This committee would meet in the mornings, and sub-committees would be appointed by it to deal with details which might require clarification in the afternoon, reporting to the main committee next morning."

All other committees were likewise to be formed upon the basis of the commission's report.

One question which I was particularly anxious to discuss was not mentioned in the agenda, namely the matter of roads, a question of so great importance to our province.

I told the conference that British Columbia offered no objection to the Dominion giving financial assistance to any province requiring it, and that we would be glad to contribute our share, but that we were not willing to surrender the opportunity for development and expansion of our resources and the furtherance of the welfare of our people.

MEETING IS ABORTIVE

The Prime Minister of Canada suggested that the nine provincial premiers should meet apart from the conference with two members of the Dominion cabinet, to see if we could not agree upon the agenda. At this meeting we agreed that agenda prepared by the Dominion government should not be passed, but that a new agenda should be prepared and full discussion thereon be undertaken, but the Dominion representatives would not consent to any other basis of discussion than that already laid down in the Dominion agenda. The meeting of the nine premiers and the two Dominion and post-war problems, but the Dominion government would not consent to the appointment of any committees, except upon the basis of the agenda proposed by themselves.

We therefore opposed going into committee upon this basis and having as done, we were still ready to discuss any and all matters, but as we and other provinces did not concur in the agenda as outlined, the Prime Minister on behalf of the Dominion closed the conference in friendly spirit.

We left the conference knowing perfectly well, that many questions will have to be discussed between the provinces and the Dominion at a later date.

NOT TO BE DETERRED

During the conference there was disagreement both in the conference and in public discussion outside the conference. Had we gone into committee upon the agenda submitted, I very much fear that grave discord would have resulted. That this view is amply justified seems clear from the discussions which have taken place since the conference.

It is well to maintain equilibrium in due course we shall again be discussing matters with the Dominion government and meantime the misrepresentations and abuse to which I have been subjected, will not deter me from endeavor to safeguard the welfare of this province and do my duty to the Dominion at the same time.

Child Killed

WINNIPEG, Feb. 1.—(CP)—Gary Chambers, three years old, was instantly killed when struck by a truck on a Fort Rouge district street Friday. It was Winnipeg's first traffic fatality of 1941 and the first in 84 days.

Red Cross Ship Sails For Europe With Supplies

BALTIMORE, Feb. 1.—(AP)—Bearing a $1,000,000 cargo of food, clothing and medicine, the 8,100-ton freighter Cold Harbor will sail from Baltimore at noon today for Spain and France.

The ship, with huge red crosses painted on its sides, will carry supplies for children in unoccupied France, for general relief in Spain, and 10,000 gift boxes for prisoners in German war camps. Half of these gift boxes came from the Canadian Red Cross.

The trip through the blockade will be made with Britain's permission.

Military Trials

DUBLIN, Feb. 1.—(CP)—The Eire government announced Friday night it has provided for a system of military court trials which would become effective should the country be attacked by an "outside power" and would be comparable to the declaration of a state of siege or martial law.

Northern Irish Are Determined Maintain Link

LONDON, Feb. 1.—(CP)—Northern Ireland is "determined to maintain its link with Britain and the Empire," Prime Minister J. P. Andrews said Friday in a speech quoted last night by the British Broadcasting Corporation.

The country also was determined to take a full part in the war, to keep social services at the same standard as Britain's, and to encourage agriculture and industry.

I Pledge

"I realize that

Canada now calls on me... to join in a great National Savings Plan... necessary to win the war and vital to my own safety.

—that the gallant men of the Army, Navy and Air Force... now on the fighting front... need me on the financial front. They need munitions, material and equipment... and only by my money which represents the production of war materials can this support be secured. They are my protectors. They call on me to be their provider.

—that this will require hard work and many dollars.

—that only by hard work and frugal living... by LENDING all I can to Canada... can I do my part to help to win the war and establish our future security.

I Pledge—

that I will forego the purchase of unnecessary articles... however small the cost... no matter how well I am able to pay for them... which take labour and materials away from the great task of providing goods needed to win the war.

—that

NOW... starting this month... I will put a definite part of my income aside in War Savings Certificates. I will have it deducted regularly... each week... each month... either from my pay envelope or from my savings account, by arrangement with my employer or my bank manager".

While Adolf Hitler was boasting loudly that "Every ship that comes within range of our torpedoes will be sunk," the United States quietly gave her answer to the threat. The force of the submarine committee of the House of Representatives expedited its investigations and handed along the aid-to-Britain bill to the President in this paper and the force of the submarine committee of the House of Representatives expedited its investigations and handed along the aid-to-Britain bill to the President in this paper and the force of the submarine committee of the House of Representatives expedited its investigations and handed along the aid-to-Britain bill to the President in this paper.

Britain, too, had her answer to this frantic and unequal—defence.

Yesterday, President Roosevelt, in Libya, 175 miles to the west of captured Tobruk, and pressed on towards Benghazi, possibly their most important port in the east. Once Benghazi is taken, the conquest of Libya will be practically complete.

Hitler's reliance on submarines and words looks particularly foolish in the light of these two important victories—one moral and one actual.

Hitler is said to have written in his history of the war, "I abhorred Chamberlain and he deeded me the British Empire."

The deed seems to have come unasked.

The aid-to-Britain bill is the greatest moral weapon of the war—next to civilian resistance to German bombs in Britain. But there were rumors yesterday that the aid originally planned may take new and more drastic form.

There is a story, for instance, that the battleship King George V, which brought Lord Halifax to America, may be traded to the United States for twenty American destroyers.

It is calculated that the value of the twenty destroyers would be replaced much more quickly by the value of the capital vessel.

It is for a conveyance of this kind that the aid is most hardy pressed. For this duty a destroyer is just as efficient as a battleship, perhaps more efficient since its speed is higher and its mobility greater.

The proposed trade would appear to be a judgment to be a good bargain on both sides.

If this offer is consummated, the chances are that the principle of trade in armaments will be more fully explored.

There are doubtless many items that could be bartered between the two nations.

Britain's defense was planned along many diverse lines. She got ready for a war of many phases. At present she is engaged in a very specialized kind of war.

Her immediate need is for weapons and armaments that will exactly fit that specialized kind of war.

The United States, on the other hand, is in the position of Britain before September 1939. The United States must be prepared with all kinds of armaments for anything.

Surely an exchange could be effected so that the United States will secure a more general range of armaments than Britain will secure those weapons which more adequately fit the need of the moment.

Berlin has thrown down the gauntlet to Vichy about our great little friend named Pétain.

The German finally demanded the reinstatement of Laval and Marshal Petain's government almost as flattery refused to consider it.

Pétain was careful at the time of Laval's dismissal, to treat the incident as a minor matter, to fear of no international significance. Perhaps no single event in the last six months threw a fiercer light on Pétain's meanness than the revelation that this dismissal was a gesture of defiance towards Germany.

The Nazi demand for Laval's reinstatement is a blow in much more than a machination designed to bring down a little politician. Much has been going on beneath the surface of which the world has never been informed.

It is very clear now that the French Chief of State has been manoeuvring a very subtle game, playing in the shadows, in a slight degree his determination to secure an independent France, he has adopted a policy of pseudo-appeasement, which up to this time, has fooled even the glibulous Nazis.

This reporter has been in and out of London for a thorough understanding has been gained for some months between Pétain, Weygand and de Gaulle. He has learned that Weygand's refusal to resign from Vichy from Africa was planned with the aid of de Gaulle, that the death sentence passed on de Gaulle was a farce in disguise, that the German, that de Gaulle and Weygand have been conspiring in Africa.

The man that has been prominently stripped from the face of Pétain's present display with Berlin seems to indicate the truth of these contentions.

There is the further circumstance, in the current news, of Charles de Gaulle's call to Vichy to take up arms again against the Axis in Africa.

That call may not be answered now. Its implication, however, is plain.

All France is at a vital factor in the war. The fact that the Vichy policy of German co-operation has been permitted to develop, that the French call for Frenchmen to take the time for the resumption of the struggle is very real.

Against the reported destruction of The Chevre Cherie in London about which is discussed grandiloquently in this place last week, an attendant news story that the house over the wine store that the fire of Chevre was caused, not by Nazi bombers, but by the private gunning of a rat, damn him, among the electric wiring about commercial stores.

Now the place is destroyed. It is being repaired and will open for business again next week.

Come to think of it, those disasters were not so good as I had thought. As I remember, the rat-bone used to stick in my throat and the latter also caused a great deal of trouble.

I know now why Chuck Arden was not so keen on the window and go away again without making himself known.

The deed seems to have come unasked.

The aid-to-Britain bill is the greatest moral weapon of the war—next to civilian resistance to German bombs in Britain. But there were rumors yesterday that the aid originally planned may take new and more drastic form.

There is a story, for instance, that the battleship King George V, which brought Lord Halifax to America, may be traded to the United States for twenty American destroyers.

It is calculated that the value of the twenty destroyers would be replaced much more quickly by the value of the capital vessel.

It is for a conveyance of this kind that the aid is most hardy pressed. For this duty a destroyer is just as efficient as a battleship, perhaps more efficient since its speed is higher and its mobility greater.

The proposed trade would appear to be a judgment to be a good bargain on both sides.

If this offer is consummated, the chances are that the principle of trade in armaments will be more fully explored.

There are doubtless many items that could be bartered between the two nations.

Britain's defense was planned along many diverse lines. She got ready for a war of many phases. At present she is engaged in a very specialized kind of war.

Her immediate need is for weapons and armaments that will exactly fit that specialized kind of war.

The United States, on the other hand, is in the position of Britain before September 1939. The United States must be prepared with all kinds of armaments for anything.

Surely an exchange could be effected so that the United States will secure a more general range of armaments than Britain will secure those weapons which more adequately fit the need of the moment.

Berlin has thrown down the gauntlet to Vichy about our great little friend named Pétain.

The German finally demanded the reinstatement of Laval and Marshal Petain's government almost as flattery refused to consider it.

Pétain was careful at the time of Laval's dismissal, to treat the incident as a minor matter, to fear of no international significance. Perhaps no single event in the last six months threw a fiercer light on Pétain's meanness than the revelation that this dismissal was a gesture of defiance towards Germany.

The Nazi demand for Laval's reinstatement is a blow in much more than a machination designed to bring down a little politician. Much has been going on beneath the surface of which the world has never been informed.

It is very clear now that the French Chief of State has been manoeuvring a very subtle game, playing in the shadows, in a slight degree his determination to secure an independent France, he has adopted a policy of pseudo-appeasement, which up to this time, has fooled even the glibulous Nazis.

This reporter has been in and out of London for a thorough understanding has been gained for some months between Pétain, Weygand and de Gaulle. He has learned that Weygand's refusal to resign from Vichy from Africa was planned with the aid of de Gaulle, that the death sentence passed on de Gaulle was a farce in disguise, that the German, that de Gaulle and Weygand have been conspiring in Africa.

The man that has been prominently stripped from the face of Pétain's present display with Berlin seems to indicate the truth of these contentions.

There is the further circumstance, in the current news, of Charles de Gaulle's call to Vichy to take up arms again against the Axis in Africa.

That call may not be answered now. Its implication, however, is plain.

All France is at a vital factor in the war. The fact that the Vichy policy of German co-operation has been permitted to develop, that the French call for Frenchmen to take the time for the resumption of the struggle is very real.

Against the reported destruction of The Chevre Cherie in London about which is discussed grandiloquently in this place last week, an attendant news story that the house over the wine store that the fire of Chevre was caused, not by Nazi bombers, but by the private gunning of a rat, damn him, among the electric wiring about commercial stores.

Now the place is destroyed. It is being repaired and will open for business again next week.

Come to think of it, those disasters were not so good as I had thought. As I remember, the rat-bone used to stick in my throat and the latter also caused a great deal of trouble.

I know now why Chuck Arden was not so keen on the window and go away again without making himself known.

WAR SAVED THUMBS UP!

When February 28 arrives, the War Savings Committee hopes to have two million Canadians wearing their War Service button. It is small and red, the wording and the hand in brown, printed on a background of white.

The Central U.F.A. fund for home use in bombed areas of Great Britain. J. E. Lessemmer, Ed Parker and A. B. Burns, members of the War Savings committee for the collection of funds for the bombed areas.

Working in conjunction with the War Savings Committee, which officers are endeavoring to raise $20,000, the local club is sponsoring a Red Cross bazaar. This will be a mixed affair and there are 44 items entered, each member contributing 25 cents for a two-game affair. To assist the funds, W. Morrison has offered a 100 lb. dressed lamb to the club to be disposed of as best possible, provided that at least $20.00 will be raised.

The Icelandic community at Markerville lost two of its old-time residents recently by the passing of Mrs. Johanna Sigurdson and Mrs. Thorborg Johansson. Mrs. Sigurdson was born in 1882, and a widow of her husband, who had been in Canada since 1902, and a resident of Markerville since 1902. Her husband was in her 70th year, and came to Canada in 1888. Mrs. Sigurdson was in charge of the services and both burials were at the Tisdall cemetery.

A Brand New Contest

the Challenging GAME OF Check Starts Monday!

A FREE
CONTEST

This coming Monday, the first three Official Cartoon-Questions in the Game of Check will appear on this page. On next Monday you can start on your way to winning $500.00 in cash, the First Prize in this contest.

The Edmonton Bulletin is giving away $2,500.00 in cash and merchandise prizes as gifts to its readers. These awards will be distributed to the 260 winners in this amusing, fascinating, exciting contest.

$2,500.00 in CASH AND MERCHANDISE PRIZES

Here's A Sample Question!

WHAT BALKAN RULER RECENTLY QUIT AND BEAT IT?

The Correct Answer to This Question Is Found Below . . . Check It!

PRINCE PAUL ☐ KING BORIS ☐
KING CAROL ☒ PRINCE MICHAEL ☐

Each cartoon in the Game of Check will contain a question. Under each cartoon-question, there will be four, and only four, suggested answers. Only one of these answers is correct. Next to each answer, a circle will be printed. Pick out the answer you think is correct and place a check mark in the circle. That's all you have to do!

In the sample cartoon above, you will find the correct answer already marked. We've checked the right answer because everybody knows that King Carol recently gave up his throne and scouted out of Roumania. So we're not telling you anything you don't know.

This cartoon is presented just to give you an idea of how the contest works. The questions in the Game of Check won't all be quite as easy as this one, but they will all be up-to-date, amusing and interesting.

NOTHING TO PAY!

YOU CAN WIN $500.00 1st PRIZE
SECOND PRIZE "COLDWALL" FRIGIDAIRE
THIRD PRIZE KROEHLER
CHESTERFIELD SUITE
Or Any Other of 257 Generous Cash and Merchandise Awards

The big feature of this contest is that it is offered FREE to readers. This contest won't cost you a penny! You don't have to buy anything; you don't have to sell anything; you don't have to pay anything!

As a matter of fact, you don't have to do anything except check the answers to the three cartoons which will appear each day on this contest page. If you check more answers correctly than anybody else in the competition, that $500.00 First Prize goes to you!

On Monday, with the cartoon-questions, will be printed the complete Rules of the Contest. They are simple and clear. You will find that there are no catches in this contest. It's fair and square in every way! It's an out-and-out gift to readers of The Edmonton Bulletin.

In Monday's paper, you will also find a complete list of the 260 prizes which will be awarded to winners in the Game of Check. Make up your mind right now to be one of those winners. Get started Monday by buying The Edmonton Bulletin and entering the contest. It'll be loads of fun, and with nothing to lose, there's no reason why you shouldn't take a crack at that alluring $500.00 First Prize!

Looking them Over

DESPITE the millions of dollars spent on golf, baseball, football, hockey and other competitive sports, hunting and fishing are still the province's most popular sports as far as the number of participants are concerned.

The present convention of the Alberta Fish and Game Association accordingly holds the interest of the majority today. The report of President William C. Fisher is cheering news. It shows that increasing rapidly, game chickens caught back strongly in the northern part of the province, pheasants and Chukar partridge on the increase and Hungarian abundant in parts.

There was a time, not so many years ago, when game birds throughout the province were on the decline and the fact that they are now coming back is not just luck. Nature had to be given a helping hand and it was conservation minded sportsmen who extended the needed help.

From now on, Alberta game bird shooting will depend largely on how well this help and protection is maintained. With the war on, it may be hard at times to continue the work, but our hunting and fishing are assets valuable enough to warrant every possible effort to preserve them.

Game, hunting and fishing are the magnets Alberta must have to draw American tourist traffic. It is looking at the problem from a purely monetary angle. On the other hand, the value of abundant wild life to native Albertans hardly needs to be pointed out.

Great as the need for money is in other ways, the provincial government should make every possible effort to build the fish hatchery aspect for in the conservation resolution. Good fishing can no longer be maintained in accessible Alberta waters without the planting of huge numbers of young fish. American tourists all think that fishing in Alberta is something worth coming for. The truth of the matter is they are being disappointed and why come here and a man who travels a thousand miles for trout to find none is as likely to make the point again.

Boxers and Wrestlers Wanted

IF YOU are a boxer or wrestler, big or little, you can help make things a lot more enjoyable for the men in the various Active Service Forces here if you will undertake to give a little of your time and ability to them every other week on the boxing and wrestling bill presented each Tuesday at the Legion War Services Hut at the Prince of Wales Armoury.

Every other week or make up the bill presented for the entertainment of the troops. The Mike Cuthbert of the Forestry Corps is in charge of arranging those bills and he would be tickled to death to use you. If you can possibly find time to help out, just phone the Legion Hut 21828 and leave your name.

The Bugle Froze Up

IT HAPPENED at last—the thing that every buck private has prayed for as he lay rolled up in his bunk and dreamed reverily.

The other morning when it was something like 25 below here, the bugler at the Prince of Wales Armouries hurried out to do his duty work and he could get out of his fiendish instrument was a faint blip that wouldn't make a mouse sleeping in the big end. The bugle was frozen up—at least what hadn't been drained out of it at night before was frozen.

But a bugler is not a man of a guy that you just can't discourage and so the one who was not. He tossed his horn aside, got a bagpipe from the armoury and paraded around the barracks making a noise that was a hundred times worse than the bugle had ever been. He couldn't play a tune on the contraption, but he certainly knew how to get volume out of it—and soldiers out of bed.

Hockey Grapevine Reports Chicago May Drop Thompson

MONTREAL, Feb. 1.—(CP)—Chicago Black Hawks never had a coach so long that he retired, and some of the tutoring genius housed in Major McLaughlin's ice empire have played scarcely long enough for the hired help to learn their first names.

Consequently, any rumor coming out of Chicago regarding a coaching change is regarded with rather more than the usual skepticism.

Local concerns Paul Thompson, coach of the year for his Hawks last season. Proving that time is feeling the heat, Thompson will be succeeded by Johnny Gottlieb, who has coached the National Hockey League since 1931.

League reports that their foundation back when Paul Goodman was leading the Hawks and that Goodman may have been displaced by the coaching job. But the feeling is that Thompson and his Hawks may play strictly close to the hilt or there may be a sudden change.

Hawks face Toronto Maple Leafs in the only N.H.L. game scheduled tonight and Thompson will be a short-handed squad out to catch a brief two-game losing streak. Injured Thompson is expected to play against the Leafs against the Hawks. Thompson will be expected to play against the Leafs against the Hawks.

U.S. Pays Tribute To Canadian Courage

Honor Paid To Delegates Taken As Salute To R.C.A.F.

OTTAWA, Feb. 1.—Flight Lieutenant Jean Paul Desloges of Ottawa, Canada, a Canadian who was wounded in air combat while serving with the Royal Canadian Air Force, was honored in Philadelphia at the annual banquet of the Philadelphia Sporting Writers Association.

An outstanding hockey player with Ottawa University, with the Royal Canadian Mounted Police team at Regina and later with the R.C.A.F. hockey club at the Trenton, Ont. base, this young French Canadian also starred as an outside forward with the Ottawa University football team and was active in tennis, riding, golf, badminton and squash competition.

Desloges had to retire from most sports for the time being because he lost the right leg of one of his last air combat while defending London from the waves of German bombers in late August, 1940. After eight weeks in a Canadian army hospital, Desloges returned to Ottawa just before Christmas and he made his first return to Ottawa just before Christmas and he made his first return to Ottawa just before Christmas.

Desloges and his squadron left Canada in 1940 and saw their first action in August after completing their tactical training at English aerodrome. The first five days of patrol by No. 1 Fighter Squadron in the English aerodrome.

ROSSDALE HOLDS SPEED SKATING

There was a good entry list in addition to keen competition in Rossdale 500 m and 1500 m speed skating races on Friday night.

Kenneth Clarke was the only able winner in the boys' events. He won the senior 400 yards open and also captured the mile. In the other 1500 m and 4000 m events, Hilda Kasting defeated Ina Wied, but the same pair finished in the reverse order in the 440 open. Hilda, however, teamed with MacWhinney to win the couple 700.

FLAG SALUTE AMENDMENT TO ACT IS URGED

School Trustees Ask Patriotic Exercise Clause In Regulations

A request that the government of Alberta amend the School Act by inserting a clause calling for some form of patriotic exercise, including the saluting of the flag at regular intervals with adequate provision made for the enforcement

Introduced by the Education Public School board, the resolution

★ Successful resolution of the aftermath of the 1967 election was a major test of the government's ability to offer the country a new settlement by a Canadian Bureau of Values and a new federal council as a

DORMITORY GRANT

In connection with the latter proposal, A. E. Ottowell, president of the Association, explained that the scheme as tried out in the United States has proved both satisfactory

Other resolutions passed during the afternoon were requests to the Department of Education to amend the Education Act so as to provide for the granting of a grant toward the purchase of land at $100 per acre, and to amend the Education Act so as to provide already in existence, which provides for the transportation of students in certain districts to and from school, and delegates full authority to the board of directors to make the most

The World's Most Beautiful Dolls On Exhibition

FEBRUARY 3rd TO 18th AT THE H B C STORE EDMONTON

TWO royal dolls from London, France and Marianne, loaned by Her Majesty the Queen, are taking up temporary residence in the aisles of the Hudson's Bay Company store and may be visited by the public from Feb. 3 to 18, inclusive. Blonde France belongs to Princess Elizabeth, and Marianne, a stunning brunette, is the proud possession of Princess Margaret Rose. The two dolls and their $10,000 collection of exquisite fashions were loaned by the Queen to the Canadian National Committee on Refugees. Proceeds from their showing across Canada will benefit European refugees and guest children from Britain who do not come under the government scheme. The show in Edmonton is sponsored by the Municipal chapter, I.O.G.E.

Above are some pictures of the beautiful dolls who will be seen "in person." (1) and (2) Marianne and France in their reception gowns. (3) Unpacking after a short journey. (4) Ready for a shopping tour. (5) The finest of furs for winter wear. (6) Packing for the trip to Canada. (7) Display of garden party dresses. The two dolls travel with 27 cases and have a wardrobe of 62 dresses, together with shoes, gloves, hats and hosiery, all made by the best French designers. These two beautiful dolls and their exquisite wardrobe were a present from the children of France to the two English princesses. They were sent to Princess Elizabeth and Margaret Rose after the return of the King and Queen from their Royal Visit to France in the summer of 1935. It was a spontaneous gift. When the visit was first planned letters were received in London from a great many French children, begging that the two princesses accompany their parents to France. But the constitutional objection to the King and the heir to the throne being out of the country at the same time, and other reasons, made it impossible to comply. Still the French children wanted to show their affection for the English princesses in some way so they collected their songs and decided to present to them the two "most beautiful dolls in the world." Before the dolls were sent to London they were exhibited in Paris for charity purposes and the fund raised went to assist underprivileged French children. That inspired the dolls' career and they already have raised a great deal of money to help unfortunate children. The two princesses were able to play with their dolls for only six weeks. After that time they gladly consented to their mothers' request that they be loaned to an exhibition to raise funds for a London children's hospital. Since then the dolls have been almost continuously on display or travelling in aid of various charitable enterprises. The money raised in Edmonton by the exhibition of the beautiful dolls will assist children, too, and those in charge are confident of a large attendance. Adults as well as children will be delighted by the display. (Page layout by courtesy of The Daily Colonist, Victoria.)

LOCK UP MY HEART

CAMILLA DENTON, just graduated from college, is on her way to California to join her father, who is a reporter. She is leaving for California in the same train and in the same compartment as Mr. North. She has seen Raymond several times before he came to the city and is carrying away a splendid automobile. The girl, however, has not known anything about the matter because a small not at all good-looking man, who is a matter of fact, has been seen by Miss Denton several times since the train left. Though I didn't bother to tell you about it, I considered it strictly private—something that I didn't need to worry you about, so I kept it to myself.

Mr. North, however, didn't look at it in that light and when she passed, Mark finally told her of having seen Cam first at the races.

any more and we're going to have a time of it if we cross her. But where's he been and what did he do to get so tired? ER—WELL, I HAVEN'T DECIDED THAT WITH HIM, ANNE. HENRY! DOCE AND ALL ALICE NEVER TELL YUM A THING YOU WANT TO KNOW. I'M H—GOUND. ALICE AGAIN—WELL, I'LL HAVE TO GET LUFFY OFF HIS TRAIN—WELL, WHEN HE DOES—IT'S THE EVEN HOUSE YOU CALL ME!

As though she already were mistress of the house, Lucia confidently crossed the room and stood looking at the sketch on the dressing board. Then she glanced at Mark whose back was toward her as he stood staring out of the window.

again at the ball, and the third time in the house, here.

"I don't see why you didn't consider it important enough to tell me!" she complained.

NO SECRETS

"After all, we can't have secrets from each other in this thing. Why didn't you tell me?"

"Well, I don't want to get her involved in this too. It's all right for me to take the change over my shoulders, but I don't want any outsiders to get mixed up in it. She was just curious, that was all, and once I satisfied her curiosity, I thought she'd respect our confidence."

Which reminded Mrs. North of why she really had come to see him.

"Outsiders already have mixed into this. I mean besides those gangsters you told me about."

"With money?" Mark was really alarmed.

"My dear little Lucia!"

"Now in the world—what business is it of hers, anyway?"

"She made it very much her business. Apparent she's smarter than we thought. She's picked up things we didn't know she knew, picked them together, and now she's making demands too."

"More blackmail, eh? Well, what does she want?"

"You, darling."

"Oh, Mark! said off the table and sound facing his name."

"What in heaven's name does she want with you?"

"Your money—your name. She says she loves you."

"Oh, but I do," she interrupted. That's exactly what I mean. She left no doubt about marriage when she talked to me a little while ago."

"But—but I don't love her! I've never even thought of her in that way. In fact, I've scarcely noticed her."

"Nevertheless, she intends to marry you."

"Don't say that! But 'Gee! Burely I'll take money if that's the sort of person she is!"

"I'm afraid the only way we'll buy her silence is for her to become Mrs. Mark Cherry."

"But it's preposterous. She can't get away with it. Why, she could get in prison for a year!"

"I mentioned that fact to her myself, and she reminded me that what we are doing isn't entirely within the law. In fact, she mentioned going to Los. Don't worry, she thought this all out before she came."

He'd gone with many girls, but he never had seemed seriously interested in any particular one. To be forced to marry a girl he said he had scarcely noticed—it was unthinkable.

It had all seemed so simple when they had first listened to Doctor Hubert. It hadn't even seemed so terribly wrong to take the law into their own hands to give Dale a chance to rehabilitate himself.

To discover what had turned a respectable young man into a brain trust before him, into a criminal and to attempt scientifically to put him back in the straight track.

Hubert's plans had worked so well that they had been lulled into a feeling of false security until Lefty Sidel and Dutch Collier had stumbled into their secret and demanded a huge sum for blackmail.

Now he was in trouble from another source, Lucia.

"I should have let her go before we ever tackled this Mr. North said."

"If we'd done all the things we've done, we'd have probably never would have lived it in the first place," Mark said. "And then Dale would never have had the chance. We had to take chances. That's the way it is. This is too bad. Somehow, we'll have to overcome all obstacles. We must."

"I had thought of—"

A moment later there was a light tap on the door and without waiting for an answer, Lucia walked into the studio.

At though she already were mistress of the house, the girl confidently crossed the room and stood looking at the sketch on the dressing board.

She examined every line of it, looking for places at Mark whose back was toward her as he stood staring out of the window.

"I'm glad you came up," Mrs. North said. "I'm just going for a ride. Will you please help me down the stairs?"

"I'm sorry, Mrs. North," Lucia's tone was respectful, but none the less decisive. "I came up to talk with Mark. Later, perhaps, we can go for a ride if you like."

"Never mind. It was just an idea. Perhaps you mean you wish to talk to Mark alone?"

Mark whirled around, his eyes carrying an appeal to his aunt, but she had already arisen to her feet and with the aid of her cane made her way to the door.

CHAPTER TWENTY-FOUR

Far from being satisfied with their plans as they had developed, Doctor Hubert's main support and his determination to stand by them to the end, Mrs. North went looking for Mark after the psychiatrist had returned to his patient.

She found him, as she expected, in the lower room which he had served as his studio. Wearing a short-sleeved black suit, Mark was so intent on a sketch he was making that he didn't know his aunt was in the room until she spoke.

"Nice sketch," she commented, glancing with interest at the face he had all but completed. Then she started. She recognized the features—they were familiar.

"Why, that looks like Miss Denton—Camilla, my companion on the trip from Chicago," she said, in surprise.

"Thanks. That's just who it is, but to be sure."

"But why Camilla? I didn't know you had seen her except for a glimpse or two on the train. Surely you'd not able to remember such a likeness after a brief glimpse like that?"

"The photographic eye, Aunt! One quick glance, and I never forget a face."

"Bosh. You couldn't even make a sketch of me, when you were painting my portrait, unless I sat for hours and posed for you."

"That's right," he grinned. "I'm sure you could."
